"Tritium couldn't be more excited to welcome Cary Segall to lead our investor relations," said Tritium CFO Rob Topol. "At a time when demand for Tritium's fast chargers continues to grow, Cary will be instrumental in advancing the Company's mission to electrify transportation."

Mr. Segall has extensive experience and deep relationships across a range of institutional investor categories. He earned a Bachelor of Science degree in Business Management and Marketing from Cornell University, is licensed with FINRA and holds the Series 7 and 66 designations.

"Throughout my career, I've sought out opportunities to drive growth across innovative companies," said Segall. "Tritium's team, products, and partners demonstrate how the Company is moving the fast EV charging industry forward, and I'm excited to be part of their next chapter. I look forward to collaborating with my colleagues around the globe as we work towards a world with fast charging everywhere."

Cary Segall will be based in New York, supporting Tritium's US, European, and APAC investor base.
